Disaster Recover Journal publishes five directories per year on a variety of business continuity topics. Our policy is to only edit the information to meet our guidelines. We neither evaluate nor rate any of the participating vendors' products or services. Our goal is to maintain an independent view while sharing information to assist our readers in making successful, well-informed decisions. Contact the vendor directly for further information on any product or service listed in one of our directories. Vendors who would like to be included in future directories should contact Laura Wilfong at laura@drj.com.

around the world to help the next generation of business and government leaders anticipate and recover from natural and man-made disasters. All of our disaster recovery services are focused on providing our customers and professionals in the field with the tools and resources they need to understand the industry and create effective solutions for their businesses. Our forum, book catalog, feature articles and business newsletter all provide the latest information in the field and give everyone from professionals to novices valuable insights into disaster recovery and business continuity. Additionally, by setting up Service Level Agreements (SLAs) you can include your vendors and customers in your disaster recovery plans. As many business leaders already know, the supply chain is vital to continued production, but it can be a weak link in areas like fulfillment and information security, so a pre-written SLA can clearly define everyone's role (internal and external) in how disasters can be prevented and dealt with. By having a comprehensive risk management plan in place, you can maintain business continuity, avoid embarrassment, and protect the bottom line for your shareholders. You can contact Rothstein Associates at +1-203-740-7400 to talk to one of our experienced staff members and learn about the different disaster recovery planning tools and that are available through us. You can also email us at info@rothstein.com with any questions or requests for information. Make sure to check back regularly to the different areas on our website to find out the latest books and other disaster recovery services we have available.
