ImpactWeather, Inc. serves as the full-time weather department for hundreds of businesses. Our services are uniquely configured for each client, a team of meteorologists learns your specific requirements and we're on the job 24/7. Some of the problems that we routinely help our clients avoid include unintentionally exposing their people to great risk; increased costs brought on by failure to pre-deploy, reassign, or protect resources in a timely fashion; lost revenues due to unnecessary or protracted closings and/or suspensions of routine operations; and potential litigation arising from losses attributable to failure to proactively monitor weather conditions. The majority of business disruptions are weather related, thus organizations of all types agree that having their own weather department is critical to the success of their business continuity plans. Clients now also enjoy business continuity planning resources from ImpactWeather's new BCP division, ImpactReady.
